De Facto Federalism in China | Series on Contemporary China
It claims on multiple accounts that China is a de facto federalist state but never even once tells the reader WHY. There is no connection between the historical digressions and this bold claim. Decentralisation and federalism are associated terms but no clear distinction is made whatsoever.

de Facto Federalism in China: Reforms and Dynamics of ...
Chinese federalism refers to political theories which argue that China ‘s central government should share sovereignty with regional entities, under a form of federalism. Such proposals were made in the early twentieth century, in connection with the end of the Qing dynasty; as well as recently, with a view to providing checks against the power of the central government, as well as settling the relationship between Mainland China, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Macau, and other potential political entities.

Federalism in China - Wikipedia
Federalism as a functioning system in China is under studied. The author defines the political system existing in China as “de facto federalism”, and provides a detailed analysis of its sources and dynamics in the book. The system is mainly driven by two related factors — inter-governmental decentralization and globalization.
